ORATORY ALTERS IN FIFTY YEARS

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, July 7.—The nomination oratory which marks the two great political conventions this year is in sharp contrast to the nomination speeches of the early days of the parties. This has been brought out afresh by inquiry at the Chicago Historical Society and the Newberry Library here.

In the first great Republican convention Abraham Lincoln was nominated for the first time, by Mr. Judd, of Illinois, in these words:

"I desire on behalf of the delegation from Illinois to put in nomination as a candidate for President of the United States Abraham Lincoln of Illinois."

The first national nominating convention of the Democratic party was held 28 years earlier, in Baltimore, May 21-23, 1832. It was at this gathering that Andrew Jackson was endorsed for his second term. Jackson had been nominated previously in a number of states by the methods which were then passing away and according to the Newberry it is doubtful if there was any speech at all placing him in nomination at the first Democratic national convention. The business of this convention was principally to nominate for the vice-presidency.

The convention adopted a resolution concerning in Jackson's "repeated nominations." The resolution was drawn in 60 words.

Previous to that time from 1800 to 1801 nominations for the presidency and vice-presidency, the well-known reference library says, were by Congressional nominating caucus, consisting of party members of both houses of congress. The last congressional caucus was held in 1824. Jackson opposing the "Kink Caucus" as it was termed, as undemocratic.

In 1828 he was nominated by state legislative conventions held in various states. Following this, popular state conventions grew up and out of them came the national conventions.

TOURISTS BLEED BY THE WAYSIDE

George Gilman, manager of the local tourist bureau, furnishes the following, says the Carson Appeal.

T. F. Gilpatrick and wife of Loveland, Colo., passed through Carson Sunday. They certainly had a tale of woe to relate in describing the roads and their treatment from Colorado to this city, a few instances of which will suffice for this occasion.

At Evanston, Wyo., they said, the charges have formed a combination with the hotels by taking out their corner houses, thereby forcing all tourists to visit the hotel to perform ablutions. Of course in enjoying these privileges, the traveler feels obligated to patronize the hotels and in doing so his purse is depleted rapidly by having the prices doubled up on him; then they get busy and endeavor the way to the camping ground and are directed to a large white gate in the distance and upon arriving there they find a fee of $1.00 for the privilege of using the entrance to the city, and upon striking out for the next camping place, cursing the new and better all whom they meet to give Evanston a wide berth.

As they came a fee of $1.00 for the privilege of using the entrance to the city, and upon striking out for the next camping place, cursing the new and better all whom they meet to give Evanston a wide berth. As they came a fee of $1.00 for the privilege of using the entrance to the city, and upon striking out for the next camping place, cursing the new and better all whom they meet to give Evanston a wide berth.

Upon arriving in Carson City the Gilpatricks were surprised to find that the city maintained such a fine camping ground and bureau of information. These together with the glad hand and broad smile of her citizens, made them feel that they were again in the land of opportunity and once more among people that know how to welcome the stranger and make him feel at home.
